CLATSOP PLAINS PIONEER CEMETERY
(1846)

The earliest burial in this cemetery, according to the markers, was the two-year-old son of James and Esther Taylor, in 1848. The cemetery is dated from the establishment of the Clatsop Plains Pioneer Presbyterian Church in 1846.

Buried here are Solomon Howard Smith and his Indian princess wife, Celiast (Helen), daughter of Clatsop Chief Coboway. Solomon Smith was the first school teacher in Oregon; also a missionary, millwright, merchant and state senator. Celiast wanted to live near her people, so Dr. John McLoughlin authorized them to settle here in 1840 (accompanying the Methodist missionaries, who left in 1843). The Smiths lived a short distance north of this cemetery, where Smith Lake is named for them. Also buried here are several of their children and grandchildren: Silas B. Smith, Charlotte Smith Brallier-Effler, Agnes G. Day, Fred Brallier, Howard S. Day, May Smith Wallingford and Baby Wallingford. The Smiths also raised Bill Stoddard; he and his family are buried nearby.

Among the 1840 missionary laity was William Wakeman Raymond, whose wife Almira is buried here, and her descendants, the Loomis family. Several of the families buried here came with the 1843 emigration which cleared the Oregon Trail as a wagon road: Ninian Eberman, John Hobson, William Hobson, George Summers and Thomas Owens. A pioneer of 1846, Clement Adam Bradbury is said to have fell the first commercial Douglas fir tree.

On the back of the Coffman family marker is a memorial to Antoine and Helen Cloutrie. Antoine Cloutrie (for whom Klootchie Creek is named) was the first postmaster of Seaside, in 1871. Helen was the daughter of Alexandre Lattie, who came to Oregon in 1831 with Hudson's Bay Company, and his Indian wife Elizabeth Sikkas. Elizabeth Lattie's donation land claim was what is now the south half of Seaside.

Carved on the stones are names of early homesteaders: Bitterling of Lewis & Clark, Kindred of Hammond, Gearhart of Gearhart, Grimes of Seaside, Brallier of Seaside and Cannon Beach, and the Warren brothers (William and Mark) who founded Tolovana Park, to name a few. George K. Grimes built the Grimes Hotel and first Broadway bridge in Seaside. J. G. McGuire was Seaside's first mayor in 1899. The names are like an index of Clatsop history.

Visitors to this cemetery are very interested in the pioneers. In 1941 the Oregon legislature authorized Clatsop County to acquire the cemetery as an historic site, and guarantee its maintenance and preservation by a tax levy. The plans to beautify the site with a "Hall of Records" and memorial park were never funded. The plans of architect Lawrence of the University of Oregon were post-poned during World War II "for a better time" which is still waiting.

Cemetery history from the Daiiy Astorian, 20 November 1975:

Unearthing County History

Stan Church, who is writing a book on the history of Clatsop Plains Presbyterian Church, is aiso helping prepare as compiete a pian as is possibie of the Pioneer Cemetery adjoining the church. Working with him are Jim Fox and the pastor, Rev. John Chatalas.

"There's a iot of Oregon history here", remarked Church as he looked over the names on the compieted portion of the piot — some 245 of them.

The Clatsop Plains church is the oldest Presbyterian church west of the Rockies and has been claimed to be the oldest Protestant church of any denomination in the same area. This is disputed, however, by the Methodist church in Oregon City.

The Pioneer Cemetery occupies a grassy swale just west of the church. It was established in 1850 on land partly donated by Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Morrison, members of the congregation, partly bought from their son William Morrison, and partly obtained from the Bosshart family.

The names of those buried there reads like a roster of the early settiers of Clatsop Plains, and many are names prominent in Oregon's early history.

When Church first planned the project, he found records of burials to be almost non-existent for the cemetery's early days. There was a piot plan in the county roadmaster's office, drawn in 1922 by Alfred S. Tee, one-time Astoria city engineer, from "an old chart". It listed many family piots, but did not list individual grave sites. Some of these had permanent markers on them, but other markers had vanished over the course of many years.

In the Astor Library, Church found a list of epitaths prepared in 1931 by the Astoria chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, including grave markers then in place. "We took Tee's old map to the drafting department of Clatsop College", Church reported. "The students made a new, legible copy. Then we laid out an enlarged plan on a sheet of paper, 4 by 8 feet, and went to work making grave sites on it." Fox, who lives near the cemetery, did much of this work. He said it became "a labor of love" as his interest grew in the project. Fox used a probe to locate some graves and by this means found several stones that had become buried as the years passed. "When it rained, the grass over the buried stone dried fastest", Fox said. "I learned that from a book on archeology". Probing in these fast-drying spots, he found a half dozen buried stones.

Church said further study of Oregon Historical Society records in the Astor Library is planned, but he and Fox are afraid that identity of some graves may never be learned.

When the project is finished, a marker at the cemetery entrance is planned, which will contain a rain-proof receptacle containing a copy of the piot plan so visitors can locate the graves. Each grave will be numbered and there will be an alphabetical list of those buried, with the grave number appended to each name. Rev. Chatalas gets many requests, particularly from summer visitors, as to location of graves and names of those buried in the cemetery.

The cemetery is now an official county park. It was taken over by the county in 1941, and a small tax was provided to help finance caretaking costs. There were plans for a $40,000 project to beautify the cemetery and provide a suitable memorial to the Clatsop Plains pioneers, but it was never done.

A visit to the cemetery is like a visit to Clatsop County's past. Resting there are such famed folk as Solomon Smith, Oregon's first school teacher, and Celiast Coboway, his Clatsop indian wife. Also John Chitwood, prominent Astorian who died in 1920 and was responsible for establishing the city park on Coxcomb Hill.

Acknowledgements

We are indebted to Stan Church, Rev. John Chatalas and Jim Fox for their recording of the cemetery in 1975, and for the previous marker readings done by the DAR in 1931, to Fred Farner for his marker photographs index, and to the LDS church for their cemetery readings.

Our thanks to Rev. John Chatalas, and church secretary Caroline Severson, of Clatsop Plains Pioneer Presbyterian Church for use of the 1975 chart and the church cemetery book. Several burials for which there are no longer markers were found, and the block-lot numbering system from the 1975 chart is used for this compilation.

Our society's president, Norma Hunsinger, located a 1944 county topographical map of the cemetery drawn by Arthur F. Danielson, engineer, copied by permission of of George Fulton, chairman since 1965 of the Clatsop Plains Cemetery Committee.

The resources and staff of the Astor Library were very helpful. The newspaper index in particular provided the means to obtain birth and death dates that were not recorded on markers, plus genealogical relationships.

Updates and Corrections

A number of dates remain unknown and gravesites unidentified, which we hope to include if the information can be learned subsequently. The names for which we have no dates appear at the end of the chronological list. The burials for which we have a name only are at the end of the location list. The few wooden markers remaining are unreadable, and some markers appearing on the 1944 map are gone. Thus, some burials remain unknown.

Anyone with information or corrections, please send it to the Clatsop County Genealogical Society, 450 10th Street, Astoria, Oregon 97103, or the compiler: Jim Dennon, 2724 Highway 101 North, Seaside, Oregon 97138, phone 738-5467.

CLATSOP PLAINS PIONEER CEMETERY RECORDS

The first three lists of burials which follow were compiled from a reading done of the markers in October 1987 by the Clatsop County Genealogical Society, correlated with earlier readings, a 1944 county map, and the 1975 church chart.

The first list is alphabetic by surname.

The second list is chronological, by death date.

The third list is by block–lot location, based on the 1975 chart.

The fourth list is a composite of the three previous readings, by surname, preserving the previous source records for comparison.

On these lists, a bracket [indicates a marker on the gravesite. This is followed by the source of the record, as follows:

[CCG means this stone was read by the Clatsop County Genealogical Society (October, 1987). Source of the first three lists except when the marker is now gone.

[DAR means this is the 1931 reading done by the Daughters of the American Revolution, Astoria Chapter. Actually, the last burial on this list was 1933.

[FFPnumber designates the photographic records taken by Fred Farner of Astoria. The number is the photo index number. The most recent stone recorded in this list was 1922.

[LDS designates the gravestone readings done by the Latter Day Saints church, the most recent record in this list 1964.

[ltr indicates information from a letter, usually family member

[map 1975 indicates information from the chart in the church done by Stan Church, Jim Fox, Rev. John Chatalas and Clatsop Community College, identifying individual gravesites, based on a block ownership chart done in 1922 by Alfred S. Tee. This is a huge chart on a roll of paper measuring about 4 feet by 8 feet (too large to reproduce).

Three maps are included with this compilation:

First, a reproduction of the 1944 topographical County map drawn by Arthur F. Danielson.

Second, a gravesite location map created by physically identifying the graves matching the locations on the 1944 map as of October, 1987.

Third, a block map corresponding to the 1975 church chart, superimposed on the 1944 County map to show the actual block locations.

Note: Since no exact plot map has been found, grave locations may be inexact within the blocks, particularly when the marker is small enough to have been moved around, or missing. Some of the markers have moved since the 1944 map, and others are missing altogether. The maps indicate where the markers are; actual burial location may vary.
